USDA Rural Development
Value-Added Producer Grants

Building a stronger rural economy through value-added business

Why Should Producers Add Value?

As producers of crops and livestock, American farmers and ranchers receive only what the market pays for a raw commodity. But when they are able to perform further processing themselves, they can reap far greater rewards—money that would otherwise go to other "middlemen," often in distant locations.

Examples of producers' adding value themselves could include a co-op or other group of wheat growers processing their own grain into bread or pizza crusts, or corn growers processing their grain into ethanol. Value-added efforts such as these not only help producers keep more of the profits derived from their efforts, but they usually help to keep more dollars in rural areas of the nation. As more foreign nations develop modern agricultural systems, it becomes ever more imperative for American producers to pursue value-added activities.

It is the goal of the Value-Added Producer Grants (VAPG) program of USDA Rural Development to help accelerate the pace of the transformation of the nation's agricultural economy into one focused on producer-owned, value-added businesses.

Since 2001, USDA has awarded $100 million for 584 VAPG projects.

What Is Value-Added?

Value-Added is defined as the incremental value that is realized by the producer from an agricultural commodity or product as the result of:

1. a change in the physical state (e.g., wheat into flour);

2. differentiated production or marketing, as demonstrated in a business plan (e.g., organic tomatoes);
3. product segregation (e.g., identity-preserved corn);
4. production of farm- or ranch-based renewable energy (e.g., electricity generated from an anaerobic lagoon).

Program Background

The VAPG program was first authorized by the Agricultural Risk Protection Act of 2000 and was amended by the 2002 Farm Bill. Grants are made to enable producers to develop businesses that produce and market value-added agricultural products. It is the policy of the Secretary of Agriculture to fund a broad diversity of projects that help increase the agricultural producers' customer base and share of the food and agricultural system profit.
